

"My Patchwork Heart"

Jessica Campbell/Michael Farren

Copyright 2013

You put the thread through the needle and you laid out the pieces,
The colors were faded stained on every square
Oh it needed repair

You took the rough around the edges
the tattered and shredded
I don't know how you did it
I just know when you were through
It all looked brand new
Anybody else would've thrown it all away

But you saw something no one else could see
It's always been a work of art
You never had a doubt what it would be
Somehow you made something beautiful out of my patchwork heart

Oh it's hard to unravel
How you took what I scattered
Ever so gently weaved it back together again
It would never love the same again
Anybody else would've thrown it all away

But you saw something no one else could see
It's always been a work of art
You never had a doubt what it would be
Somehow you made something beautiful out of my patchwork heart